I am writing to you to highlight the work of Coping Ireland, which will launch later this month, is a significant step towards care for children born to Irish priests.

The organisation will provide a forum for those impacted to speak about their experiences in a compassionate and professional environment.

By recognising the work of Coping Ireland, individuals who have previously had no formal support structure will now have a forum in which to share their experiences, thus helping to de-stigmatise this issue.

I would urge you to engage with this new organisation.

Yours sincerely,

Mairead McGuinness MEP
